Recall elections will destabilize democracy and leave it prey to the media.

The media has, on past occasions, manipulated the baser instincts of the public to destabilize elected governments.

A system of recall would only advantage the wealthy and powerful.

The narrow base of media ownership in Australia and the assault on the ABC during the Howard years has diminished the ability of the public to receive balanced reporting and editorialization.

The "Murdoch amendments" of 1981, which emasculated media ownership rules in Australia, are a salient reminder of the power of the media to influence the public and gain advantage for from political manipulation. see Paul Chadwick in The Multinational Monitor OCTOBER 1987 - VOLUME 8 - NUMBER 10 Australia - Controlling the News

Australia is not California!. Democracy has been subverted in California by recall elections. According to Wikipedia, there have been recall attempts initiated against every governor of California since 1968.
