Making bushfire evacuation quicker ...
Evacuation from bushfire threats invites some degree of urgency and roads are often our best escape route. Yet evacuations of towns on the South Coast of NSW in last summer's bushfires produced images of long queues of cars waiting to fill-up at petrol stations. Some people chose to leave early but even then, the wait for fuel could be lengthy. Paying for our petrol can take as long as filling-up, particularly if there is loss of power or telecommunications causing difficulties with payments. Perhaps payment could be waived for those who have been told to evacuate but need to fill-up. The Government could foot the bill as with other means of evacuation. Let us make bushfire evacuation quicker.
