Your story

I am concerned that property owners in suburban Sydney on the fringe of National Parks and bushland are misusing the 10/50 code. It appears in a number of cases clearing has nothing to do with bushfire risk or hazard reduction, but as a way to remove trees and vegetation prior to lodging development applications. In other situations it is simply an opportunity to remove healthy urban tree canopy that inconveniently sheds bark or drops leaves. These practices are exacerbated by unscrupulous tree loppers who have no regard for threatened species or habitat hollows. These activities should not be condoned as part of the NSW Bushfire Inquiry.
